

PROLIFE FACTS

France is recognised as perhaps the most secular nation in Europe. An estimated 200,000 abortions are performed every year. Yet on Sunday, 23rd January, 40,000 Parisians turned up for the seventh March for Life. Looking at the photos of the march, the striking feature is that the majority of marchers appear to be young adults. Their faces are joyous and full of laughter. A watching reporter observed that the majority would be Christians – a sign of hope for the future in a Europe well down the track to demographic decline.

The same phenomenon is happening in the United States with the annual March for Life in Washington DC attracting record crowds of young people who bus and fly in from all over the country. A prominent pro-abortionist watching the 2010 March for the first time, later wrote of her horror at seeing many thousands of young women dedicated to opposing abortion.

Half page
95 x 128.5

PROLIFE FACTS

On Sunday, 23rd January, 40,000 Parisians turned up for the seventh March for Life. The majority of the marchers appeared to be young adults. The same phenomenon is happening in the United States with the annual March for Life in Washington DC attracting record crowds of young people who bus and fly in from all over the country.

Eighth page
47.5 x 128.5

PROLIFE FACTS

There are an estimated 200,000 abortions performed in France each year. Yet on Sunday, 23rd January, 40,000 Parisians turned up for the seventh March for Life. Photos of the march show that the majority of marchers appear to be young adults. Their faces are joyous and full of laughter. A watching reporter observed that the majority would be Christians – a sign of hope for the future in a Europe well down the track to demographic decline. The same phenomenon is happening in the USA with the annual March for Life in Washington DC attracting record crowds of young people. A prominent pro-abortionist watching the 2010 March for the first time, later wrote of her horror at seeing many thousands of young women dedicated to opposing abortion.

Quarter page
95 x 64

PROLIFE FACTS

On Sunday, 23rd January, 40,000 Parisians turned up for the seventh March for Life. The majority of the marchers appeared to be young adults. The same phenomenon is happening in the United States with the annual March for Life in Washington DC now attracting record crowds of young people from all over the country.

Banner
25 x 128.5