

PROLIFE FACTS

With the passing of yet another ANZAC Day we reflect on the sacrifices made by those who fought for king and country, a huge number giving their lives. Perhaps some of these brave soldiers might have been disappointed that the freedoms they were fighting for were later to include the legal termination of future unborn Australians and New Zealanders.

It is estimated that there are between 40 – 50 million abortions annually worldwide. Of course the victims of abortion must also include the “walking wounded”: men and women who are seriously harmed by their part in an abortion. ANZAC Day honours those who gave their lives fighting for justice and freedom. In New Zealand today, it takes a lot of bravery to stand up against abortion because it is an uncomfortable subject, it can involve sacrifice and it requires a lot of thoughtful consideration in order to promote the most effective and compassionate approach. However, like the ANZAC soldiers who fought for the principles that New Zealanders held dear, today we are challenged to stand up for justice on the issue of abortion.
